Ask The Secret Admirer

Dear Leon Wolffe,

I keep getting shafted by girls for superficial reasons. I go on dates with people and everything seems awesome and then I don't get any further than a couple of dates because of stupid reasons like I didn't take a shower that day or something, or my feet smell or something. Are girls just more superficial than they let on? I don't want to change how I am just to impress someone who's shallow anyway. Do you think that girls are superficial?

-Frustrated

Hey there, first of all I don't think that it's productive to generalize. That type of opinion will drive folks away quicker than the smelliest feet. Secondly, I think that you're latching on to a superficial problem so that when you are rejected, you can avoid any meaningful introspection. Never assume you know why someone doesn't like you. It might be that you smell, but based on what little of your voice I've heard, it's probably your personality. Try to dig deeper when you're rejected and see if there's another reason for it. And in the mean time, just take a damn shower. It's basic etiquette to clean up at least a little bit before you try to stick your filthy hand down someones pants. It's not selling out to change your socks. Show a modicum of concern. ♡the SA

lullabies for the lonely

Hello there. It's Tuesday and you know what that means. Here we are with the second issue of the Admirer since eschewing the use of graphic design software. So far the main difference ~~has been~~ is that, without the option of easily cutting and pasting content, all of the content and art is new every week.

What is art besides a message in a bottle, cast in desperation from our innermost self with the hope that it will float the boundless sea of seperation between us and everyone else to wash up on the lonely shore of someone elses innermost self and there be understood? We owe it to the aspect of ourself that is both sad and hopeful enough to throw that bottle to keep the message pure and fresh-- an accurate telling of our tale. The job of editing and refining your art is never done.

And so when I die someday, there will be a single issue of the Admirer, refined every week of my life and still left unfinished, floating in a bottle sealed with yellow wax, bobbing the bottomless tides between you and I. All I can do is draw this map and hope you have a compass. ♡
